Narrator: Once upon a time there was a little star that sparkled in the Milky Way. Her name was Starbright. Each night she had the same dream. She wanted to be a little girl. One night she whispered her wish to best friend.

Starbright: Oh, Redstar, how I'd love to go to earth and be a little girl. How can I ever do that?

Redstar: I have no idea. You know it's best not to make wishes that are too grand.

Narrator: But that didn't stop Starbright from dreaming. One night, in a little town that lay beneath the starry sky, a young girl was staring out her window.

Susanne: Oh, how I wish I could be as bright and beautiful as that star. (points to Starbright) Come on, Buddy, help me get my wish.

Buddy: (barks) Awww. What can I do? I can only bark and bark. (barks) But maybe Rosycat can be of help. (barks) She's a star cat for all the magic tricks she can do! (barks) Rosycat! Rosycat! Sneak in here.

Rosycat: Meow! Meow! You called?

Susanne: Yes, Rosycat. I need your help. I wish I could be as bright and beautiful as that star. (points to Starbright)

Rosycat: Oh! Is that all? That's easy to do. Just draw a star on a piece of white paper and color each point with real gold paint. Then cut it out and hang it from the branch of the orange tree in the garden. Wait three hours and then the magic will happen.

Buddy: (barks) Are you sure?

Rosycat: Am I not a star cat with all sorts of magical powers? Enough work for today. I'm going to lie down and rest. Meow! I'm exhausted!

Narrator: Suzanne followed Rosycat's plan. After she hung the golden star on the tree branch, she hurried back to her bedroom and sat by the window watching. Suddenly a storm rose upon the horizon. The winds blew and rain poured out of the sky. The little paper star fell from the tree and sank in a muddy pool.

Starbright: Oh! The star! The star! It's disappeared. I must go down and find it.

Narrator: As Starbright fell to the earth, Susanne rushed out of her house to the tree. Rosycat was perched on the windowsill smiling a wide grin.

Rosycat: Mew, mew...Now let's see what is going to happen.

What happened next?
